Land is the key asset and a source of economic empowerment for the human being. However, in Pakistan the land ownership has been concentrated in the hands of big landholders, Jagirdars, and sardars. Poor people's access to and ownership of land is emerging as one of the development challenges in Pakistan.

In this context the women have emerged as marginalized section of society and in Pakistan as the land ownership policies and practices largely discourage the women's ownership of land. The objectives of the study are to examine the gaps in land distribution policy and program of Sindh Government. To identify gaps and issues in and distribution process and procedures. To study the issues of post land distribution sustainability vis-à-vis the benefits of program. To prepare recommendations/suggestions for the government and civil society.
